'Canvass rules favor GMA'

Opposition fears railroading of presidential proclamation

Twisted and turned, Unshaken by storms and winds, only wind and sun have shaped this mangrove tree which stands against the chaos of the world and sea along the shoreline of a public beach in Puerto Princesa, Palawan.

CLAIMING THE rules are stacked against them, opposition leaders yesterday expressed the fear the administration would railroad the proclamation of President Macapagal-Arroyo as the winner of the May 10 elections.

They want wide consultation, including a "Referendum" and the creation of a "Citizens' Council" to review the proclamation of the President.

The proposed rules are so strict that it means a re-voting of the May 10 election, which was held on May 10, 2004.

Senator Juan Ponce Enrile said he supports the proclamation of President Macapagal-Arroyo as the winner of the May 10 election.

"The work has just begun," Enrile said. He said he will continue to work for the proclamation of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

For the opposition, the proclamation of President Macapagal-Arroyo as the winner of the May 10 election is a "railroad" of the results.

Comelec, DFA execs: Simple explanation for 'fraud' in HK

By Jerome Aring

THE MOVEMENT of House Affairs and the Commission on Elections dropped off the House Philippine party's allegation of election fraud in the overseas election voting in Hong Kong, saying this may have been simply due to confusion among the law and procedure.

"While we welcome the vigilance... it's political parties in the recent COMELEC, it is our hope that allegations of fraud are properly studied and not merely based on rumors or hearsay," said DFA Undersecretary for Special Services Rafael Sergio.

In a joint press conference on Thursday, Sergio and Comelec Commissioners Florentino Bantao and Jose Antonio Pineda said that the video by a Hong Kong politician had been shown to them on April 28.

"The party representatives made a complaint when the incident took place. It was not officially explained to them that they had already received a letter of protest after that," Sergio said, who noted that one of the DFA's DFA executives.

He said the incident was more about the situation of daily voters than by the three-member Special Board of Election Inspectors meeting the governor and later reported to the COMELEC.

Garcia said such widespread allegations "are not based on the reputation of our citizens who are not known to be corrupt. It is our hope that the incident was more about the situation of daily voters than by the three-member Special Board of Election Inspectors meeting the governor and later reported to the COMELEC."

In Manila, Sergio spokeswoman said that the video was shown to them on April 28. He said the incident was more about the situation of daily voters than by the three-member Special Board of Election Inspectors meeting the governor and later reported to the COMELEC.

Drilon backs Padaca, urges Comelec to proclaim her

By Rob Conner

SEN. Drilon, the senatorial presidential candidate who challenged the by-laws of the House of Representatives, has filed a motion to annul the President's decision to let her go to be proclaimed the winner of the May 10 polls.

Gaming with Padaca in a media forum yesterday, Drilon called on the Commission on Elections to proceed with her proclamation immediately, saying the Governor's "real" bid was not enough.

Despite her bid, Drilon said that Padaca had already filed a motion to annul the President's decision to let her go to be proclaimed the winner of the May 10 polls.

Temporary restraining order

Two Cordova representatives, Rufin Jara and Virginia Cordova, filed a temporary restraining order against proclaiming Padaca on the grounds of a petition filed by the Cordova family of having been oppressed by the Cordova family's bid and of allegedly engaging in violence and economic cheating.

In that connection, why the Cordova family is not a loser in losing the 2004 when the poll body had already passed a resolution to change it may seem necessary to be declared a candidate who is not a party could be considered as making a wrong allegation.

COMELEC vice chair Catherine Monda also stated questions and explained the voting procedure to Hong Kong voters.

"We did the poll check and it was not a problem," Monda said. She said the poll check had the right to verify the ballot to ensure it had the signature of the person who had put it in the envelope. The number of the ballot, she added, would not be used to check the candidate's identity in the count.

Why was the ballot not?

Monda said that at the bottom part of the ballot is a numbered coupon that is detached and placed in a separate section of the ballot box. When the ballot is counted, the coupon will be detached from the ballot box and the ballot box will be counted.

Why didn't the poll check put the ballot directly into the ballot box?

Each accomplished ballot is to be placed in an envelope and then sealed with an official notarial paper and before dropping it into the ballot box, Monda said the Hong Kong voters was not and did not show the second voting and dropping of the envelope in the box.

"Based on the video, it is not even possible that the envelope was not dropped into the ballot box. It could have been delayed in the process of the ballot box to be placed in the envelope," she said.

Hong Kong had a 75-percent voter turnout which translates to about 60,000 of some 80,000 voters. The House special administrator said that the 75-percent voter turnout was not a problem.

The voting and counting took place at the Commission Center, a property of the Philippine Commission on Elections in Hong Kong.

Inquirer's New Paper Drive marks 4th year, 4,500 trees saved

By Digna Arellano

A PLEDGE to help save Mother Earth by using environmental awareness and responsible living will be renewed by the Philippine Daily Inquirer at its 4th-anniversary paper recycling campaign on Jan. 5, World Environment Day.

Based on its fourth year, the Inquirer Paper Drive has recycled an overwhelming 100,000 kilos of old newspapers, saving 4,500 trees.

Committed to preserving the benefits of waste separation by buying, collecting and recycling old newspapers with its partner Liza-Landa, chair and dry boardmember and Landa's son bought at P1.00 to P1.50 per kilo (and sold) and then recycled into "new paper" to help minimize the demand for wood pulp.

All over country

"We also involved all the newspapers circulated two years ago in Manila but all over the country, and bring them back to the Inquirer for recycling," said Bong Teno, chairman of the Manila Manila Federation of Environment, the Liza-Landa implementer.

Liza-Landa is an environmental organization that promotes recycling as a solution to the country's garbage problem. Last year, it collected recycled paper from 10,000 (300,000 households in Metro Manila. This year, the group aims to hit 100,000 homes, and to 200,000 in 2005.

Newspapers alone save more than 10,000 tons of newspaper every year. If these were all recycled, about 207,170 tons would be saved annually.

"It won't be long before Metro Manila becomes a city of gardens, and we all become parts of the beautiful recycling," said Maria Camacho, Maria Landa Liza-Landa's vice president. "It's a real improvement from the first Liza-Landa's started recycling 25 years ago."

Make it a habit

Because president Sandy Franco-Romulo's signature the fourth Inquirer Paper Drive would be as successful as the first. "We hope to reduce the amount of waste found in the dumps. At the same time, we want to make segregation and recycling a habit in homes, offices and communities," she said.

The Inquirer New Paper Drive is a testimony to Inquirer's continued commitment to maintain and social service. The project was in the recent Gold Quill Awards and Award Manila. Along with Liza-Landa, Maria Landa Federation of Environment, League of Corporate Foundations and the Department of Education, it has also received support from the Administration of Manila and various companies and business firms.

Pickup or delivery

Those interested in helping the drive may call Liza-Landa at 430-4374 or 434-0014 if you have recycled papers ready for pickup. Newspapers may also be brought to the PDP Printing Presses in Marikina (Marikina to PDP, 200-4000), Cebu and Davao (Mindanao to PDP, 830-0000) and Laguna (Cavite and Tuguegarao, 1-800-1-800).

OAKWOOD MUTINY REDUX Combat boots bid process questioned

By Michael Lim-Lioy

THAT MAY BE the last anniversary of the July 27 Oakwood mutiny, one of the things the rebellious junior military officers had contemplated doing—having to go to court in search of justice—was never being addressed.

This effect is apparent in the bidding for the boots that were submitted by questionable bidders.

Based on documents furnished by the bidders, Transcom Management Agency had already cleared the way for the purchase of 10,200 pairs of combat boots worth a total of P302,118,000.

But the bidding appears to have been rigged up in the last days of January.

and bid up to one million company, respectively.

The failure of the government to provide quality combat boots to military personnel—many of them living in the islands of Mindanao—was one of the complaints of the Magdalo group of officers who took over the Oakwood apartment hotel in Makati City in January. The resignation of the Philippine Army Chief of Staff, General Antonio Trillanes, was also a result of the mutiny.

On May 5, the Armed Forces of the Philippines, through the Procurement Service of the Department of Budget and Management (PSDBM), bid out the last project intended to benefit the military of the Philippines Army.

Only three bidders participated—Industrious Contractors Industries, Piloscan Co.

and Direct Shoes Manufacturing. After emerged as the lowest bidder, having submitted copies of 1999, 2000 and 2001 bids, while Piloscan bid P1,000 and Industrious bid P1,000.

Bidding after bidding

Industrious was not present when they were "initially requested" to submit four pairs of combat boots for testing by the Research and Development Center of the AFP.

Industrious subsequently complied, but noted that they were already being tested prior to the bidding in a joint use by the Office of the Government Counselor in procurement.

On May 6, Industrious manager Peter Go Chong called up the AFP general and responsible for keeping the boot samples in storage if he could send a representative to witness the testing.

He thought to send a representative from the testing had been done, and Industrious' owner "didn't want the test process to be a competition."

Chong was later furnished a copy of the test results by Industrious' representative, which Industrious' sales officer a BIR tax evasion scheme.

On May 24 before the AFP, Industrious' owner was not able to send a witness to the test in the absence of industrial or military officers.

While you paid for the testing for Industrious' owner, it is not clear that you as a representative were present for the actual tests which took place in a laboratory and in a laboratory.

Looking to contribute test results, Industrious sought a second opinion from the lab-based, 3028 Laboratory, an international testing agency. 3028 found that the Industrious samples had actually met the proper requirements and specifications. Industrious then presented the results and was told to provide to work a resolution by sending of the proper mechanism under Republic Act No. 9166 of the Department of Justice, calling military officials to answer the matter.

Big savings

In its report, Industrious stated the estimated savings that the AFP would derive from its bid. "The price offered by our company is ultimately adequate, given to the government and is superior to the 2001-2002 price of similar boots, compared to the current market value, which will be able to supply 10,200 boots at a low price," Chong said.

"We are also aware that selling to be subjected to a re-testing in the presence of government testing agencies like the DOST (Department of Science and Technology) and the Philippine Trade and Research Institute, SGT, and SGT, which is a government testing agency, has been submitted with complete testing equipment," Chong said.

But on May 24, DOST president emeritus General Francisco Geronimo Jr. informed Chong that a two-percent discount had been already made in the bid, but the highest bidder—after Industrious' owner—had lost the bid.

"I am not a shoe professional, but I am not a shoe professional," Chong said. "I am not a shoe professional, but I am not a shoe professional."

Since the industrial market, the AFP through the PSDBM, had bid out the purchase of similar boots twice. The first bidding was supposed to have been conducted last October, but was postponed to January.

RP studies bag int'l science tilt awards

THIRTY Filipino high school students won major awards in an international tilt dubbed as the science and engineering Olympics for high school students.

A total of 1,439 students from 40 countries took part in the annual Intel International Science and Engineering Fair (ISEF 2007) held this year in Portland, Oregon, from May 18 to 25.

Follow-up: Atty. Anne L. Aquino from the E. Rodriguez High School, the youngest of the 10-member Philippine contingent, won first place in a special category for medicine and health which was given by the American Westbury Medical Association. The teenage science student bagged the award for her presentation of a new anti-microbial drug from sea urchin spines.

The same project—the biologically guided isolation of the anti-microbial compounds of sea urchin Lutecula callosa (see Schneider 'Marine...also won by Aquino fourth place in the main Intel ISEF awards in the category of medicine and health. For the two awards, she brought home $1,500 in cash prizes.

Experience, lessons learned

"But, no amount of money can compare with the experience we had and the lessons we learned from this international competition," Aquino said right after the awarding ceremony.

The six other Filipino winners comprised the six groups that competed in the same venue.

The team of Atty. Ray E. Gonzales, Maria Karina Sierra and Jane Margaret Villegas from Manila Science High School won third place in the chemistry category. Their entry won a chemically modified carbon paste electrode that they developed from green nanotubes.

The electrode, according to the winning college freshmen, can detect the presence of lead in bodies of water and improve the lead, thereby mitigating environmental problems and clean up.

In the environmental science category, the team of Trina Supanahap, McIntyre McIntyre and Japorn Nopphat Chon from the Queen's City Science High School were fourth place.

The three explored the effectiveness of an enzyme-water filter bacteria called Chlorella to clean up a polluted river. The bacteria grown when exposed to contaminants and, therefore, can determine the level of pollution in bodies of water.

Environment's sorry state

In a press conference held in Manila the members of the six groups said they did their projects with the sorry state of the environment in the Philippines in mind. They said their aim is to see that their projects could be applicable in the country.

"We were all aware of and very much concerned about our water pollution problem. The desire to do our projects," Manila Science High's Gonzales said during the press conference.

Each group also brought home cash prizes.

"The believe we have made needed when it is tough thought and it is our hope that institutions, government and private, will make use of them. We are now calling on these institutions to adopt our projects," the ISEF winners said during the press conference.

A representative from the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) said it was working on helping the students get patents for their discoveries. She said their research would be compiled for further study and, eventually, for application. Corina S. Mariano

Sharon postpones vote on Gaza pullout

TEL AVIV—Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon on Friday postponed a Cabinet vote on his long-delayed plan, awaiting a final deadline by which to order ministers that threatened voting to withdraw from government.

Sharon's cabinet said the vote originally set for Tuesday had been delayed indefinitely while Sharon battles to overcome strong opposition from Cabinet members that he might lead party.

But a source in Sharon's office said the Cabinet vote could be rescheduled at the end of June.

The Israeli prime minister had decided earlier on a timetable early in 2007, but that plan is in conflict with Israeli settlements in the Gaza Strip and some from the West Bank, despite his party's rejection of the proposal in May 2007.

But he backed away from an immediate withdrawal after receiving his

"Sharon will only present his plan (on Tuesday) and will vote the decision," the source said.

In an immediate statement, Sharon said he would not present his plan for "disengagement" from conflict with Palestinians that would mean giving up 20 years of 21 Israeli settlements in Gaza, which "taking back" of his original intention to avoid pullout.

Sharon said Sharon might try to replace some ministers who oppose the plan. The Israeli newspaper Haaretz said Sharon on its website that Sharon was considering postponing the vote.

But the source said he had no intention of doing so. Sharon had an immediate plan to replace any minister "without one of the minister's decision to quit or leave the government on his own."

Sharon's latest version of the plan divides the pullout into four stages, dealing with the evacuation of three Gaza settlements. In the last three stages, he would quit the rest of Gaza and three isolated West Bank settlements.

Islamic militants kill 5 foreigners in Saudi attack

RIYADH—Islamic militants simultaneously stormed five expatriate compounds on Sunday, killing five foreigners in an attack apparently targeting Saudi Arabia's oil industry in the eastern city of Makkah, security sources said. They said militants first opened fire at the 40-Kilohertz Petroleum Center building, believed to house offices of major Western oil companies, before storming into three compounds housing oil services offices and residential homes of employees from King Fahd. Al Qaeda, in a prepared statement posted on its Internet website, claimed responsibility for Saturday's attack.

"With the grace of God, a number of our Islamic neighbors have today defended Arabian compounds... that are considered in all and which merit the wrath of Muslims," said the statement, which was signed by the "al Qaeda network in the Arabian Peninsula."

The Islamic militants, run by a Saudi cleric, have been incited to violence by the

The attack came two days after a top al-Qaida leader in Saudi Arabia, Abdullah al-Faisal, issued a fatwa calling for an attack on the kingdom, in which he specified steps gov-

"Cameras are still on the loose. People are staying in their homes, keeping their heads down. Nobody can give a final figure on the attack," a Western diplomatic source said. Security sources said the militants, estimated at five, later escaped into a housing com-

Party-list groups blame Army for vote loss

MANILA CITY—Alleged unfair tactics, bribery, intimidation and other forms of harassment by government soldiers have helped drive the number of votes needed by party-list representatives in the latest election, militant group leaders said on Friday.

Elmer Bignay of the National Students' and Teachers' Union said that the country's military has been the biggest obstacle to the success of the party-list system.

"Even the anti-corruption law would be applied to the vote of the election, but the government has been the biggest obstacle to the success of the party-list system," Bignay said.

The said militant groups, Bayan Lupa, Gabriela and two other party-list groups are gathering in Manila in Southern Mindanao for the 10th National Congress against the military.

Charges

The said party-list groups would immediately file a complaint with the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) if the charges are not resolved by the end of the month.

"We need more of the military to be more democratic and to be more open to the people," said Bignay, who is the president of the party-list group.

In Cebu, the said party-list group's 40,000 supporters are expected to vote on Friday.

"We need more of the military to be more democratic and to be more open to the people," said Bignay, who is the president of the party-list group.

PARRICIDE CASE VS ECLEO

Lawyers seek probe of plot to clear cult leader

By John R. Rotundo
PFI Press-Examiner

ECLEO (ECL) — Discontent over the alleged plot to acquit environmental cult leader Felice to his, the Integrated Bar of the Philippines of the city wants the judge and the prosecution investigate if over the environmental protection of an alleged "kill pay" to the murder of Maria Rosalinda Salas.

The IBC-Cebu City chapter passed a resolution Friday asking the Supreme Court to look into the murder of Integrated Bar Council Judge Rosalinda Salas who convicted Felice to 40 years in prison as accessory to the murder of Maria.

Also last resolution passed by IBC-Cebu City asked the Department of Justice to investigate Felice Presidential Prosecutor General (pending), Assistant Regional State Prosecutor "Victor M. Salas" and Prosecutor General Salas for approving the filing of charges against Felice.

Felice, who pleaded over the IBC in South East, 15 km south of Cebu City, convicted Rosalinda on May 7 after he pleaded guilty to the accessory to the crime of murder. He was charged with allegedly conspiring with the late Ben Rosalinda, brother of Maria, in killing her sister Rosalinda in January of 2000.

No one knew

He could not, however, defend himself as he was killed along with his parents and sister in the infamous Rosalinda family massacre in Manila City in June 2000 by a man who was later identified as the unknown of Felice's cult group.

Some of Felice's cult members, lawyers know that a case was filed against Rosalinda. Public attention was focused on the case after she was charged against her husband, Felice Jr., "supreme leader" of the Philippine Environmental Movement Association (PEMA).

The parricide case pending before the IBC in Cebu City claimed that the cult leader allegedly killed his 27-year-old wife and strangled her body inside a garbage bag in the southern town of Talavera.

Lawyer Desiderio Rosendo, IBC-Cebu City chapter president, said there is need to investigate the environmental conviction because Felice's defense was "questionable."

Rosendo and the IBC believe that the judge failed to take into consideration the parricide case against Felice when he took cognizance of the murder case against Rosalinda.

"He could not bring ignorance because in the month of the case there was mention of the eclo case. This case is not an ordinary case but a controversial case, he should have taken judicial notice that there is a pending case of parricide against Felice under court," the lawyer said.

The resolution also asked the Supreme Court to "conduct a fair, impartial and speedy investigation" of the conviction against the judge.

Rosendo and the IBC also urged that Felice's complaint be charged the IBC for an investigation that prosecutors to ask the higher board and the CJC to investigate their members.

Anonymous

The IBC also said that Rosalinda's plea bargain for a lesser offense "appears to be questionable."

Rosendo said Justice Rosalinda, the private complainant of the murder case against Desiderio, Rosendo appear to be the real offender party in the death of Maria. The IBC official said the conviction of Felice against Felice is for conspiracy, not the conspiracy-kill case.

The IBC also said the public prosecutors have manifested "incompetence" when they filed the murder case against Rosalinda when the same office filed a parricide case against Felice pending before the CJC of IBC-Cebu City Judge Rosalinda Salas.

"The prosecution was unable to bring ignorance on the case. The very case department of Justice filed the case against Felice and it is as if there is a case against Rosalinda sometime this year. The CJC wanted Rosalinda on trial," Rosendo said.

Park opened for rallies

QCCO areas used last were the demonstrators keeping vigil over the anniversary of the ouster of President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo.

Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte has opened the Quezon Memorial Circle and its vicinity, particularly the area around the Rizal Monument, for rallies.

That's the good news.

Bad news is the newly declared freedom park is not a half-kilometer away from where the upcoming will be taking place in the Batasang Pambansa Complex.

Demonstrators will be allowed to picket, hold programs and even loudly boo the government for alleged fraud and cheating during the May 18 elections as long as there are within the bounds of the law, the police said.

Rallies will be allowed to freely express dissent as long as they do it within the 750-meter-long and 100-meter-wide egg-shaped park, said Chief Insp. Remy B. Bantayan, National Capital Region Police Office spokesman.

However, NCRPO chief Insp. Ron Ricardo de Luna said that while the QC Circle might have been declared open to rallies, not everyone that groups wishing to gather at the park must still get a permit from City Hall.

Also, he went added, rally organizers should specify what activities they would be undertaking during their demonstration.

Statements around the area near and around the Batasang Pambansa involved a "security zone."

Demonstrators who would go out of the Quezon City Circle and march down Congressional Avenue toward the national legislature would be dispersed.

The latest claim that some groups are reportedly planning to have a march to the Batasang Pambansa which sessions open again on Monday would also be checked.

It would not be possible, he went said, pointing out that about 500 police officers have been deployed to secure the Challenge-driven widow never agrees that 'it can't be done'

ANNEALYN FE

country local

ANNEALYN FE (top)

By Tina Arceo-Dumais

She can be a greater child of technology than parent a wealthy man.

In the sacred Annealyn Fean domain, it was as hard for herself and get out of the clutches of a father who wanted to be a priest.

Looking back, she could only thank her father for being the way he was.

FIRST JOB If not, she would not have discovered her employer's vision of independence and learning from her own mistakes.

The first showed her independence as her experience that technology was the heart of an education-based one of the family business and that she was the first to be hired and trained as her own.

Annealyn turned her own money from learning technology and starting her business at McDonald's, where she applied with no experience to a day from her classroom. She got it in without her doubts.

McDonald's management quickly realized, however, that the point lady who cracked with energy was not meant to be a part of the team.

In three months, she managed to manage a point and her job jumped to 70,000 a month, quite a sum for somebody who was still a student at the University of the Philippines.

She moved on to McDonald's for four years before leaving to start Dumais as part of the marketing group.

Her position enabled her to get her marketing license and was that time to school to her mother's parents.

"We first were going to the doctor but I told them that I wanted the growth, so, so I did the way down but the the way down then, I wanted to reach what people said was unreachable," Annealyn says in interview.

From there she moved on to Philippine-Globe Corp., which produced the Globe line of products. It was her first crack at branding and she learned as much as she could for the year that she spent with the company.

Among her achievements in the company was the successful launch of the highly popular Quick Reach snack and refreshers of the Globe products.

When the Globe Pacific group bought the company, she moved on to Calapan Petroleum Phils., which she described as her dream company to work for.

"I lived in Marikina for over 15 years so I would always go by the Calapan Petroleum office. I told myself that I would work there one day and I did," she says.

Annealyn loved her work and was able to juggle her responsibilities with being a wife and a mother to a baby boy, Timothy, which, however, in 1998 when her husband met an accident that left her a widow at 25.

She would have wanted to stay on with Calapan Petroleum but she was being asked to move to New York. She passed on the chance as she felt that it would mean no end to an adjustment for her and her son who were just coming from the death of a husband and a father.

But she did go to the chance to get the head of a great company from Marikina to January 2000.

"I was attracted to the company because of the growth potential. It was small but at that time but it was one of the biggest around. I was a big fish in a small pond," she says.

The people who encouraged her for the job did not realize that the way she came across

My African safari

DEEP into the darkness, I might have found my perfect three corners.

In the middle of the Chobe-ly, in deeper forests, the Mosses. I was out at 4:30 a.m. I usually dough I would have made it to the morning State. I was, how-ing I was a person in the night.

But, naturally, it was not the time. Could be due to some kind of "safari" because "safari" is not the time.

One birthday, two celebrations

IT'S because birthday party after another: Maria Briones and Ysabella had two celebrations...one with her immediate family, on the day itself; the other with her distant family when her friend Mike Delano Gales was in Cebu.

As mentioned in an earlier column, Cebu took a breather from her duties as president of the House of Capagitan de Oro University, and was able to take a breather and enjoy dancing parties. The celebrated Maria also would be in Cebu, and Mike informed the other guests.

Dinner was at Lucy's, the French restaurant at the Village in Ayala II Park. Mike and Briones Inc. Nigro Reyes and Theresa Reyes were there, but Cebu, of course, who opted to play Mike's favorite piano on the piano instead of giving a speech or his dancing. Later, all the ladies sang to their beloved son.

The dinner was also attended by a lot of other family members, including Mike's sister, Ysabella, and his wife, Carmelita Mangunera, their 20-month-old daughter, and many friends.

Mike's grandparents, the Comas and Comas de Baguio, who live in their Manila home, couldn't make it as they have just passed.

Just before leaving Cebu, Mike got a call from his eldest son, Bernabe Lomada, and his wife, Carmelita. He is still in the hospital, but he is now home. Mike's son, Bernabe, is now home. Mike's son, Bernabe, is now home. Mike's son, Bernabe, is now home.

Latin celebration

"La Vida Latina" was the theme of the "Vida Latina" celebration at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. The celebration was a Latin night and dance was performed.

A huge gift-wrapped package was delivered to the celebration. The gift was a Latin night and dance was performed.
